Schedule F, Part I, Line 2 - The International Society for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect (ISPCAN) provides assistance to various child protection and child abuse prevention organizations outside the United States in order to fulfill its mission of protecting children around the world from abuse and neglect. This assistance is for training and education in the areas of child abuse prevention and treatment, capacity building for child abuse programs, and development of training and resource materials. The organizations that ISPCAN works with are well-known and well-respected nonprofit organizations specializing in the prevention and treatment of child abuse and neglect. These organizations are researched by ISPCAN prior to beginning the process of program development within that country. Some of the requirements for these organizations are open membership, national scope of projects and work, multidisciplinary focus, at least two years as a registered nonprofit organization in their country, a provision for training and education of child protection professionals in their normal activities, an organizational constitution, an elected board of directors, and letters of recommendation from well-known and respected organizations or individuals in the field of child protection. Before assistance is provided to an organization, ISPCAN and the organization discuss the funding available, other sources of funding available to the organization, and the goals and outcomes to be achieved. The organization then provides a proposal, which includes a budget, specific objectives, measurable results, and details of the training and other projects that the organization will provide. After the specific trainings, other work, and budget are agreed upon, the assistance is provided. Upon completion of the specified trainings, workshops, and other projects, the organization provides documentation to ISPCAN, which includes budget versus actual expense comparisons, copies of payments made by the organization, and a narrative report that details the trainings and workshops that occurred and specific outcomes achieved. In addition, ISPCAN also has regional coordinators who liaise between ISPCAN and the nonprofit organizations. The regional coordinators attend many of the trainings and other events to monitor the quality of the trainings and workshops and to ensure that the goals of the program are being met. The regional coordinators also provide annual reports to ISPCAN and work closely with ISPCAN's staff and its Education, Training and Resources Committee.
